Bloom Community Farm and The Hunger Coalition seek business partnerships

Join us in a ground breaking opportunity! Are you interested in increasing your exposure to new clients and highlighting your positive impact on the local community to your existing clients? The Hunger Coalition is seeking business partnerships for our newest endeavor to improve access to healthy food for everyone.

Bloom Community Farm, located in Quigley Canyon, will provide many opportunities for youth and adults through growing and accessing healthy, local food. Join us in “Growing a community through food”!

Your sponsorship in the “Friends of the Farm” program provides many benefits, listed below. It increases your exposure to existing clients and affirms your support for our local community. Our donor list will also expand your exposure to thousands of people with a common interest of creating a healthy environment for all.

Bloom Community Farm will provide a place for diverse partnerships with local organizations and continued expansion of food production programs supporting the health and well-being of all community members and their families.

Modeled on existing successful programs across the country, such as Volunteering for Veggies, Discount Mobile Markets for seniors, and sliding scale Community Supported Agriculture, Bloom Community Farm will help The Hunger Coalition craft new programs to meet the changing needs of individuals and families in Blaine County.
